Storm Shock Gives Way to Rebuilding Towns, Lives

CHARLES CITY, Iowa (AP)

— The vastness of tornado destruction wrought on three northeast Iowa cities is matched only by the determination of their citizens to rebuild.

"A guy works all his life to get a home paid for and just that quick she's gone," sighed Gordon Mead as he walked among the rubble.

"But I'll build it here again. If I can get it cleaned up around here, I'll start next week."

"This city will come back," said Mayor Samuel Mazziotti of Oelwein. "We've going to rebuild. This city has a great deal of faith in the felt."

Charles City and Oelwein, 50 miles apart received the brunt of two powerful tornadoes which ripped straight through the cities' business districts late

The Red Cross listed 15 dead - 12 at Charles City, one at Oelwein and two at Maynard just north of Oelwein - and three missing. The number of injured was placed at 693 by the Red Cross, and hundreds were left home-

"It looks like we've been bombed." commented one businessman.

Volunteers and equipment from throughout Iowa and some neighboring states poured into Charles City, population 10,419, and Oelwein, population 8,282, to help with cleanup operations

"I don't know where we'll put the rubbish," said Sheriff L. L. Lane of Charles City. "We don't have room at the dump."

Gov. Harold Hughes declared northeast Iowa a disaster area, qualifying the stricken cities for state disaster loans, and he asked President Johnson to provide all possible assistance.

"Is it a disaster area?" asked Hughes as he toured Charles

City Thursday. "Hell, all you've got to do is look down the street to see that."

Tre governor estimated total damage in the area at $38 million, including $5 million to public facilities.

Hughes said he had faith that Charles City and Oelwein would quickly rebuild, but he expressed concern over the future of Maynard, population 515, which had part of its residential area virtually leveled.

"It's difficult for a small town to recover from some-thing like this," said Hughes

Some downtown businesses in Charles City and Oelwein still without electricity and windows smashed — opened Thursday afternoon. There was a brisk trade in axes, saws and other tools.

Education in Year 2000: Blend of Old-Fashioned, Wildly New

By JACK MILLER

WASHINGTON (AP) - A group of educators peering toward the year 2000 predict radical changes in the American way of living and learning in the generation ahead

They foresee a greatly expanded system of education that would blend the wildly new with the distinctly old-fashioned to produce a higher level of learn ing and culture

The thinkers, headed by Louis L. Bright, research director of the U.S. Office of Educa-

In a series of interviews, the educators emphasized that their goal-and that of the centers-is to determine possibilities rather than plans But they generally envision a society 30 years from now in which

-Children will start school around age 3 and continue studying regularly throughout their lives

-Adults in nearly all work classifications, including profes sionals and top executives, will have to be retrained about every 10 years because of the out pouring of new knowledge and because machines and computers will be taking over their

-Youngsters and adults alike will use new techniques and materials which permit them to learn on their own, in or out of -Traditional boundaries be tween school and work will be erased work-study programs will be common

--Subject matter will emphasize general principles and methods of thinking and learning rather than specialized in formation that quickly becomes outdated

-Students will be taught more about how to express themselves, how to get along with others and how to live fuller lives. Starting youngsters in school at age 3 is expected, Bright because research has shown that the learning experience of children prior to normal school age has 'a fremendous and permanent impact on their abilities to learn He said the change should raise the learning capacity of most children and greatly imthe performance of prove youngsters from poor back grounds.

The educators expect a great increase in the amount and efficiency of learning from use of a technique, now in developmen tal stages, called Individually Prescribed Instruction---IPI

The approach which many educators believe will have a revolutionary impact on education is to provide materials speetally suited for each individual at his stage of learning. This requires great quantities of mate rials and the means of pulling out the right ones quickly

It infilizes so-called grammed materials, which present the student a small him immediately and let him know if he has mastered it Bright and his aides set the
