

Webpage Outages & Delays Possible This Week

On Tuesday October 20, 2014 the National Weather Service in Burlington, Vermont will be undergoing a major hardware and software upgrade. During the installation, several of our web pages will become stale and outdated, but most should begin updating again by the end of the day. Some pages could remain out of date through the week as we sort out any issues that do arise.

Point and click forecasts should not be affected, but some other pages such as the recreational forecast, current observations, and mesoanalysis may experience some down time. We appreciate your patience as we go through this process, and rest assured we will be working hard to bring our site back to 100% as soon as possible.

Thanks!