Traffic Jams In Maynard, Charles City

MAYNARD — An estimated 3,000 to 4,000 cars were driving through Maynard Sunday after sightseers flocked to the area to view tornado damage.

No true number had been set up and many traffic jams were reported.

For example, in Charles City, traffic from sightseers was a near standstill as the city was surrounded by a sea of cars. Traffic was congested, but moved relatively smoothly, officers said, backing up for at least a mile at times. A total of 12,200 had been collected from sightseers.

Texas Trooper Marvin Monday urged a full legislative investigation into the "corroborating evidence" of the Department of Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare.

Bromwell, a candidate for Republican nomination for U.S. Senate, charged that such actions by agricultural employees on the federal and state levels were a violation of public funds.

"Government employees should be serving the needs of the people, not winning political appointments," he said.

The Visitors were required to stop in at a gas station and were not allowed to leave their vehicles unattended. The town was completely abandoned. At one time, traffic was bumper to bumper for nearly five miles with traffic being backed up for at least a mile.

Community leaders, who had alleged that the town was being abandons by the town, were reported as saying that they had no idea how they would continue in their clean-up operations.
