

THE EDITOR SPEAKS

One cannot help but admire the courage and stamina of the residents of Charles City who suffered untold hardships in Wednesday's tornado.

We have personally observed many war-ravaged cities during our stint in the military, but none exceeded the havoc sustained by our neighbors to the north.

It seems certain that Charles City residents, once split over the issue of urban renewal, will unite in a spirit of cooperation and community bond that will take it out of the depths of destruction to a new and vital role in the development and progress of Iowa.

However, our help is needed now and will be needed for a long time to come. Good, staple food, and lots of it will be needed for weeks, so if you can help, see that it is placed in the proper hands for delivery. Contact Claire Curtis in Greene, and he will see that it reaches the proper authorities in Charles City.

KCHA will be broadcasting the other needs, so if you desire to help in other ways, instructions will be relayed via the radio. In the meantime, don't hamper the cleanup by sightseeing excursions.

Tornado Levels Large Sections of Charles City - -

The devastating tornado which descended upon Charles City last Wednesday afternoon tore huge swaths through the residential and business districts, leaving shambles throughout the stricken area.

A killer tornado struck Charles City at 4:50 p. m. Wednesday, May 15th, destroying over twenty million dollars worth of property and taking at least 14 lives.

The tornado destroyed at least three square miles, taking residential and business property from the south end of town clear through Charles City in a north-easterly direction.

Cars, trucks and buildings were tossed about like playthings. Over 1,000 cars were completely destroyed and many, many more were damaged.

Between 400 and 500 persons were taken to the Floyd County Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment from injuries sustained in the twister. Many of the injured were transferred to hospitals in Mason City, Osage, Waterloo and Waverly and Rochester, Minnesota.

Among the injured was David Markle of Greene, who was pinned underneath the rubble at the Farm Tractor Company in the north part of Charles City. Mr. Markle sustained multiple fractures of both legs and was taken to the Mercy Hospital in Mason City where he will be a patient for some time.

Another Greene resident, Mrs. Myrtle Shapley, suffered a broken leg in Gibsons, one of the stores demolished in the tornado. She was admitted to the Floyd County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

The twister that hit Charles City demolished a couple of farms directly south of the hospital, lifted enough to spare the hospital from severe damage then lowered again and took everything in its path clear through town.

Of the 3,600 families in Charles City, 2,200 were affected by the twister. A total of 372 homes were completely destroyed, 188 got major damage and 356 received minor damage.

Thirteen farm houses were devastated, 13 were damaged badly and 8 more received minor damage.
