

Urge Citizens To Make Repairs

Property owners with homes or businesses damaged by Wednesday's storm have been urged to make any temporary repairs necessary to prevent further damage by wind and rain.

John Korpela of the catastrophe committee of the Iowa Insurance Association, said any such necessary and reasonable temporary repairs will be considered part of the insurance claim. For this reason property owners should keep a record or receipts showing the cost of such temporary repairs.

"Broken windows should be boarded up or covered with canvas, polyethylene or other suitable material," Mr. Korpela said. "The same should be done for holes in the roof."

He said property damage covered by insurance should be reported without delay to local agents. This will speed the adjustment claims.

Additional adjusters are being rushed to the area by insurance companies and adjusting organizations to expedite the processing of claims, Mr. Korpela said.

He said that if the damage is obviously less than $50 and the policy has a $50 wind and hail deductible, no claim should be made. However, the deductible clause, which results in a lower premium charge to the policyholder than for "first dollar coverage" applies only to buildings, not to loss or damage to household contents. Personal property inside a building is covered in full.

Adjusters will give priority attention to dwelling owners whose homes were damaged so badly that they can't be lived in until repaired.

Those persons who have widely sold "homeowners" insurance policy or similar broad coverages and who must seek temporary quarters can receive certain reimbursements under the policy's "additional living expense" provision.

This coverage takes care of actual additional expenses incurred by the insured in maintaining as near as practicable the normal standard of living of his family while his home is being replaced or repaired.

Depending upon the type of policy carried, the amount of additional living expense reimbursement available ranges from 10 to 20 per cent of the amount of insurance on the house itself.

Mr. Korpela said that persons who have this type of dwelling insurance and who have had to leave their homes because of the damage should consult with their own local agent immediately for details of the additional living expense coverage as certain records must be kept.

He also urged all property owners who have left their damaged homes to keep their agents informed as to their new address so that adjusters can locate them.

Receives Post Doctoral Grant

FAYETTE — An Upper Iowa College professor has received a post-doctoral grant to participate in a seminar for emotionally disturbed children to be held June 26 to August 13, it was learned by College officials today.

Receiving the grant is Dr. Andre Nadeau, professor of physical education. The grant pays for eight semester hours of tuition and provides for a $2,000 stipend and round-trip plane fare to Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The training program will enable professors to prepare their own curricula and training programs at both graduate and undergraduate levels to train physical education-recreation specialists for work with emotionally ill children.

Participants will have the opportunity of working with a variety of specialists from the mental health professions as well as colleagues from their own specialties. The program is supported by the National Institute of Mental Health and is being carried out in collaboration with Buttonwood Farms, an agency that has pioneered in physical recreation work with mentally ill children.

Dr. Nadeau joined the U.I.C. faculty in 1960. He received his B.S. degree in 1940 from Appalachian State Teachers College and his M.A. degree from New York University in 1947. He was awarded the Ph. D. degree in 1966 from the University of Iowa.

Announce Plans For Annual Cookout King

FAYETTE—Plans for the 1968 Iowa Cookout King Contest were announced recently by Harold Mindermann, Iowa Farm Bureau livestock marketing director. Mindermann reports county Farm Bureaus are planning to hold a number of local contests through out the state. And he urged Iowa's outdoor chefs to compete in the local contests.

Winners in any of the six divisions—beef, pork, lamb, poultry, turkey and novelty—in the local contests are eligible to compete in the state finals on Aug. 21 during the Iowa State Fair.

A number of prizes will be presented to division winners in the state contest and the cookout king receive a complete Maytag laundry center—washing machine and gas clothes dryer. In addition, if the cookout king prepares his entry on a gas-fired grill, he'll receive an expense-paid vacation for two to Las Vegas for three days and two nights from the gas industry in Iowa.

The state contest is sponsored by the Iowa Farm Bureau and its affiliated companies plus a number of cooperating business firms and commodity organizations.

Winners in cookout contests will be selected on the basis of excellence of preparation, use of Iowa quality products, originality in selection of meat cut and its appetizing appeal and showmanship. The contest is open to all Iowa males over the age of 12.

WC School Board Approves New Football Field

MAYNARD (Special) — The West Central Community board of education meeting in regular session Monday evening, May 13, approved the construction of the football field and the baseball field and authorized going ahead with the seeding, finishing work and realignment of drainage tile in the area.

A diploma was issued to Donald Moffett, former Maynard resident now living in Madison, Wis., who has now completed all requirements for graduation. He left the Maynard school in 1943 when his parents moved from this community.

The school owned house in the west part of town has been rented to Lee Whitmore, Basketball coach at West Central, for the coming year. It will then be advertised and sold.

The pay for activity-trip drivers was set at $1.50 per hour. One additional bus route will be needed for next year. The resignation of Mrs. Darwin Fink, a teacher's aid, was accepted.

The board authorized Superintendent Robert Jacobson to attend the education conference called by the State Department of Public Instruction at Spirit Lake June 2-4.

Journalism Short Course Available

AMES — High school graduates unable for one reason or another to attend college this fall can learn the basic skills required in a newspaper career by enrolling in the seventh annual short course in community journalism July 15-Aug. 22 at Iowa State University. On-the-spot news gathering, photography and advertising are areas in which young men and women will find satisfaction and financial reward.

Cost for the six-week program is $275 which covers room, board and tuition. Students live in a University dormitory and have access to all University facilities and activities including recreational programs. For commuters the cost is $150.

Since enrollment for this year's short course is limited to 20 students, interested persons are urged to apply early. Application blanks for further information may be obtained by writing Friederich at the Department of Technical Journalism, Iowa State University, Ames, 50910.

MANY AREA CITIZENS, especially Methodists, will remember former Grace Methodist church pastor Gerald E. Bisbee, who preached in Oelwein in 1954. He's been a big hit in Duluth, and is scheduled as guest speaker for the dedication banquet for Herman L. Rowley Memorial Masonic Home, Perry, August 24.

DR. BISBEE, the Grand Lodge Bulletin announces, has visited 85 per cent of the world outside the iron curtain, from Iceland to the tip of Africa, South America, the Caribbean, Europe, Middle East and Far East. He directed student work at the University of Minnesota at Duluth for seven years, was awarded the "Man of the Year" recognition in three different cities and has been presented the Key to the City of Duluth. . . . thanks to Glenroy Rundle for calling this to our attention. . . .

LOCAL BUSINESS MAN chuckled as he recalled driving through town on Mother's Day last, and saw a fellow and his wife PAINTING THE HOUSE! She was helping him out on Mother's Day! How 'bout that!

NEVER DRIVE an oncoming car. Nothing good ever happens to oncoming cars. They are forever colliding with vehicles that travel in the proper direction, but out of control.

It is also wise not to drive light-green panel trucks. We don't know why.

Avoid boulevards with timed traffic signals. If you drive at precisely 25 mi. per hr., you hit nothing but green lights and cars going 22 mph, avoid south approaches to bridges. The word "approach" has a tentative connotation, indicating that highway officials aren't sure it will work.

Stay off routes whose numbers include 13. If you are not superstitious, you may be side swiped by someone who is; and if this cracks your rearview mirror, you are in for seven years of you know what. (Phoenix Bedside Book, thanks to R.C.)
