Initial Cleanup Began Immediately; Hughes Visits Area

CLOTHING FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross officials were overwhelmed with clothing for needy residents three days after the tornado struck the Oelwein and Maynard area. Volunteers joined hands to place the clothes in areas where it was needed immediately and store the remainder for use throughout the cleanup period.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.

EXTENSION SERVICE ASSISTANCE TO AREA FARMERS—Mary Lacock, home economist for Fayette County, was so overwhelmed after the tornado demolished many farm properties that she stopped her overloaded schedule to talk to women workers at the Alshouse farm north of Oelwein. The Extension Service is currently working out of the Oelwein airport and may be contacted there for assistance.

EXTENSIONS THROUGHOUT THE CITY and from area farms, colleges and high schools throughout the state came in by trucks, cars or school buses to get here just to help—and they did a magnificent job.

NORTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY employed not only donated the entire basement of the building for headquarters, but worked continuously to open lines for emergencies such as ambulances and fire departments.

CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY. Red Cross volunteers served 3,500 meals a day Thursday through Monday at the Presbyterian Sacred Heart church basements. Pictured above are Mrs. Robert Barton, Mrs. Melvin Stella and Mrs. E. C. Anderson.