

This was the week that we wish wasn't... but it's about over...

Weren't those pictures by Milton Smith, 70, and Chris Frank, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Frank, of the tornado excellent? Did any other amateur photographers in the area get any such shots? If so, let us know.

Bouquets galore to the countless volunteers who helped in any capacity during the past week! The cooperation has been tremendous! Those women who manned the lunch rooms at the Presbyterian church and at Sacred Heart did a superb job. We understand that Father Richard Hess supervised the kitchen at Sacred Heart with the regular hot lunch cooks backing him up. The meals were more like banquets!

Among those we know who have lost their homes were the Frank Gates', the James B. Crowley Jr., the Delbert Straws, Mrs. Roy Eck and Evelyn, the Charles Abels.

Two retired John Deere workers from the Moline, Ill. area were in Oelwein during the past week running a Red Cross mobile unit. They made special trips for aspirin, hot bean soup, etc. Grace Fossati of the St. Louis Red Cross office was among the out-of-town and out-of-state personnel working in Oelwein during the disaster.

Sightseers were out in great numbers Wednesday, just a week after T-Day, to view the destruction. It's hard to believe that so much cleanup work has been done in such a short time. Ex-service men have said "the buildings look like they've been bombed," and like a war, a tornado, too, leaves its scars.

As it has been written, 8,000 persons have 8,000 stories of the tornado. We're hearing so many... like the robins, who undoubtedly lost their home in the storm Wednesday, were back in the nest building business Thursday when they began a new home in a bird feeder. The Richard Bunns, who lost their home, are living in a trailer on the grounds.

Dick says, "The only disadvantage to the trailer is that although it is cozy, we're both a little overweight and keep getting in each other's way!"

You know what I miss these days? The laundry whistle which blows at 10 and 10:10 a.m. and at noon and the Presbyterian church chimes! And yes, even the curfew siren at 10:20 p.m.

A tornado watch is usually three to four hours before a storm actually hits and a warning is given when a funnel has been sighted. This is not the time to run outside to look at the sky but to take shelter in the southwest corner of a basement or an inside wall!

Mr. Oelwein of Pocastella, Idaho wrote for copies of the Register covering the tornado and so did Loyd's of London!

Glancing thru your pages the last few nights it appears that Oelweinites are extremely anti-social and all Scout troops have disbanded" jests a friend in a note. She goes on "Wednesday afternoon some Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts with Dan Jaggard and some Girl Scouts from Troops 176 and 140 and I manned rakes and cleaned yards in the northeast section of town. I figure they are the lucky ones. Not all Scouts in the United States are handed an opportunity for real community service. They did a man-sized job," she concluded. Thanks Joanne!

The group will welcome its new jewel pin member, Mrs. King, with a dinner Saturday night at the Jungle Inn at Independence. Summer activities were planned and at the close of the evening, the hostess served lunch.

This farm card was picked up at our farm about six miles northwest of West Union on May 21 by K. J. Evenson, 322 E. Plum, West Union. It reads the writing on a post card addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Rueber, 524 5th Ave. N.W. The Ruebers had received a post card invitation to a graduation dance for Sharon Clendene and Gwen Zingg which is planned for Saturday, June 1, and the invitation was at the Rueber Auto Sales office on City Park Road when the tornado hit Oelwein last Wednesday.

We can't say much for our building... but take a peek at our window and notice the ribbons. These were awarded May 20 at the State Convention in Des Moines. Along with the ribbons, we have the honor of making the competitive prints for the Professional Photographic Artists of Iowa for the oil coloring division. The P.P.A. chose this print from all those exhibited at the State Convention.

This year's ribbons include:

- First Place—Children's Portraits, b&w
- First Place—Group portraits, b&w
- Second Place—Open Class, b&w
- Honorable Mention—Men's Portraits, b&w

We'll be back—with a new building and the same award winning photography.
