Harriman Presses Thuy

PARIS (AP) — U. S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman charged today that North Vietnam has sent more than 200,000 troops to fight in South Vietnam in the last four years and most of these have "become casualties of the combat or fallen prey to disease or other mishaps."

Harriman made this assertion in pressing Ambassador Xuan Thuy to admit that Northern troops have been fighting in the South, a contention which North Vietnam has implicitly denied.

A U. S. spokesman said later that Thuy seemed to come close to acknowledging that Northern troops are in the South. Thuy declared that once the United States had attacked Vietnam "any Vietnamese had the right to fight and to do that on any part of the territory of his dear country."

This is virtually the same language as Thuy used before but the U.S. side was interested now in his emphasis on "any Vietnamese" having the right to fight "on any part of the territory."

The United States had long contended that the Northern buildup in the South began in late 1964. Harriman said "well over 200,000 North Vietnamese have been dispatched into the South since autumn 1964."
