Continue Deadlock In Talks

PASADENA—U.S. and North Vietnamese envoys clashed today over ways of determining the way to Vietnam. The talks again took on the form of a blockage by North Vietnam, which rejected U.S. proposals for a cease-fire and for withdrawal of U.S. forces. An official in the U.S. Embassy in Paris, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said that North Vietnam made no move to withdraw its troops.

The talks are expected to last for several more days before the envoys return to their capitals.

The envoys joined in the session yesterday were the U.S. negotiator, Undersecretary of State Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., and the North Vietnamese negotiator, Foreign Minister Le Duc Tho.

Mr. Lodge was addressing the envoys today. He said, "I have no desire to continue the war, but I have no intention of fighting for the peace."

Mr. Tho, who spoke after Lodge, said, "The United States is a great people, a great country and a great nation. We have a great culture and a great civilization. We have a great history and a great future."

The envoys said that they would continue their talks in Paris today. They are expected to return to their capitals on Friday.

The envoys have been trying to negotiate a cease-fire and to work out a peace settlement in the war in Vietnam. The envoys have been meeting for several days, and the talks have been deadlocked.

The envoys said that they would continue their talks in Paris today. They are expected to return to their capitals on Friday.