

Gallabat Taken By British Again

Italy Denies Important Contact Center Fell

London, Nov. 12 (UP)—British forces in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan again have taken Gallabat, important communications center on the Ethiopian border, military quarters said today.

Gallabat was lost to the Italians by a weak British garrison soon after Italy entered the war but last week a British motorized column attacked in force and captured the town, taking large number of Italians and their equipment. Later the British were forced to retire under a heavy Italian counter-attack but today it was understood that Gallabat again was in British hands.

(Today's Italian general headquarters communique, issued in Rome, said that the Italians still held Gallabat and that heavy British attacks had been repulsed.)

British military quarters said that at another important Sudanese point, Kassala, across the border from Italian Eritrea, heavy fighting between British and Italian detachments was proceeding.

Siegel Expected To Seek Delay

Murder Syndicate Suspect Faces Trial

Hollywood, Nov. 12 (UP)—Benjamin (Bugsie) Siegel is expected to plead for postponement today when he goes on trial for participating in one of the out-of-town jobs of Murder, Inc. His attorney, Jerry Giesler, said he needed more time to prepare a defense.

Siegel, who was an habitué of Hollywood's better night clubs before police captured him in the attic of his Holmby Hills mansion and took him off to jail, is accused, with two others, of shooting Harry (Big Greeny) Greenberg last Thanksgiving eve.

Greenberg, it was said, fell out with the New York leaders of Murder, Inc., and fled to the coast, where he was slain because his confederates were afraid he was about to "squeal." Harry (Champ) Segal and Frank (Carbo) both fugitives, were indicted with Siegel.

Petersen Will Continue Battle

Criticizes Papers For "Prejudice" Against Him

Minneapolis, Nov. 12 (UP)—Hjalmar Petersen, defeated farmer-labor gubernatorial candidate, last night said he would continue his fight against legislation sponsored by the administration of Governor Harold E. Stassen.

Petersen charged that the history of the state has never witnessed such a spoils as practiced by this administration in its first seven months.

Petersen maintained that the present Minnesota civil service plan has failed to reach the goal of the merit system.

He also criticized Twin City newspapers for what he termed a display of "much prejudice" against him during the campaign.

Britain To Get 13 "Fortresses"

Bomber Delivery Said Planned This Month

Washington, Nov. 12 (UP)—Thirteen of the improved type flying fortress bombers are scheduled for delivery to Great Britain this month, an informed source said today.

They will be the first of the flying fortress type plane made available to the British. They are Boeing B-17C's, third in the series of the four motored long range craft which air corps officials believe to be the most potent bombers existent.

First of the B-17C's ordered by the army last spring was delivered to the air corps last month. The British had sought to obtain some of the earlier models, known as the B-17B. Administration officials had agreed to make them available after the election because later types were already on the production line.

However, with the announcement by President Roosevelt of a program to share armament production with the British, the latter decided to forego the B-17B's and wait for the later type. The production schedule this month, an official said, calls for the completion of 26 B-17C's. Half will go to the British and half to the army air corps.

British purchasing officials here have never too enthusiastic about the B-17B because it lacks sufficient rear gunner protection for long range operations without fighter plane escort.

Some of the shortcomings of the B-17C have been eliminated in the B-17D. The new type has a rear gun emplacement and armor plate protection for the crew. "Blisters" for gun nests have been eliminated from the sides of the fuselage for better streamlining and greater speed. The new type is reported to have an effective flight range of between 3,000 and 4,000 miles fully loaded.

Rescue Workers Dig At Wreckage

London Printing Plant Hit; Many Trapped

London, Nov. 12 (UP)—An air raid alarm sounded before noon today after a quiet night in which no enemy planes crossed the coast after 9 p. m.

Rescue workers still groped at a pile of wreckage left by yesterday's raiders—the ruins of a printing plant, where many were trapped. Twelve dead and 17 survivors, most of them injured, had been taken out this morning. Others were believed still buried under tons of debris. The managing editor was among the dead.

Today's first alarm in London passed without incident. No bomb explosions or gun fire was heard.

An air ministry-home security communique said the raiders had made only small-scale attacks on London and isolated parts of England yesterday evening and that by 9 p. m. all raids had ceased and there were no further bombings in any part of the country the rest of the night.
