

Unnamed 1957 Remnants

Unnamed 1957 or Hurricane Ten was a tropical cyclone that affected Mexico during the 1957 Eastern Pacific Hurricane season. It made landfall over the state of Baja California Sur, Mexico, crossed the Gulf of California and made landfall again over the state of Sonora, Mexico; both times as a Category 1 hurricane. The hurricane weakened as it traveled through the Mexican state of Sonora and Chihuahua. The remnants of this hurricane eventually passed through the El Paso and southern New Mexico region on October 10, 1957

Unnamed 1957 Track

Rainfall totals from Unnamed 1957's Remnants recorded from the El Paso International Airport amounted to 1.3 inches

Evidence of Unnamed 1957's Existence From The Lewiston Daily Sun Newspaper

STORM CAUSES TWO DEATHS IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Oct 6 AP—A three day tropical storm caused two deaths and considerable damage along the northwest coast of Mexico during the weekend.

A dispatch from Guaymas said the two deaths occurred when a house collapsed at the town of Empalme. Serious damage was reported to the cotton crop in Sonora and a similar report came from La Paz, Lower California.

A bridge five miles south of Empalme was washed away and hundreds of cars were reported bottled up on the main tourist coastal highway.