

Want to be a Weather Observer?

cocorahs.org

CoCoRaHS is a grassroots, non-profit, community-based, high-density precipitation network made up of volunteers of all backgrounds and ages who take daily measurements of precipitation, snowfall and snow depth in their backyards.

The National Weather Service is looking for precipitation observers across Minnesota and North Dakota.

All you need is a 4" diameter rain gauge and internet access.

We offer training and guidance on how to observe the weather.

CoCoRaHS: Community Collaborative Rain, Hail, and Snow Network

For more information, go to: www.cocorahs.org