

National Weather Service

Wilmington, NC

Outlook Period: Friday, Mar 16 – Sunday, Mar 18, 2018
 Time Issued: 9:30 AM Friday, Mar 16, 2018

Prepared by: Tim Armstrong

Overview: A cold front will move southward across the area this afternoon. This front will stall tonight, then waver across the Carolinas through the weekend. Small chances of rain will develop Saturday, but better rain chances will probably wait until late Sunday night into Monday as low pressure develops along the front.

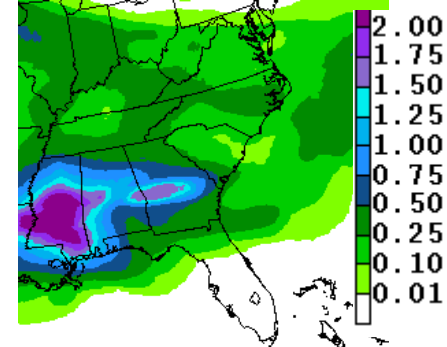

Impacts: Low humidity and breezy winds will create increased fire danger today. A Small Craft Advisory continues through this afternoon for the coastal waters. Southwest winds could again approach Small Craft Advisory thresholds Saturday and Saturday night.
