Overview: Cool, dry weather today and Saturday will become unsettled Saturday night and Sunday as clouds and increasing rain chances spread onshore. The best rainfall potential will be in the Cape Fear area with lesser chances inland.

Impacts: Forecast rainfall amounts through Sunday will range from half an inch on the Cape Fear beaches to little or none west of Interstate 95.

Small Craft Advisory conditions for winds and seas may develop across the coastal waters this weekend.

Minor Cape Fear River flooding may occur during high tides for vulnerable locations near downtown Wilmington.
