

Inland Areas Were Not Spared

BURGAW — Lila Covil locked the doors of her 150-year-old home Wednesday, sealed the windows and headed for her son's home in Durham.

Mrs. Covil, 82, got her first look Saturday morning at what Hurricane Fran had done and started packing up again.

The wind ripped loose the roof from her one-story white home on N.C. 53, weakened the chimney and left an enormous oak tree resting on the house.

Friends and family helped remove, wipe off and pack Mrs. Covil's belongings, which were covered with dirt, paint chips and crumbled concrete. Rocking chairs, clothes and antique lamps survived Fran's ferocious winds, but treasures like Mrs. Covil's inherited ceramic figurines were crushed.

Her son, Steve, said his mother's things will be stored and she'll live with him in Durham for a while. He doesn't know if the house his mother has lived in since 1954 is livable but he plans to one day return to Pender County.

"She'll be back. Her friends are here, and she loves Burgaw," Mr. Covil said.

Mrs. Covil, who has been a widow a number of years, was too shaken and distraught to talk. "She is an upset person," her son said. "It just shows you how down she is."

The scene was the same throughout much of the inland areas in Southeastern North Carolina. Please see INLAND on page 1B.

Home secured, a moment too soon

North Topsail Beach resident Clark Council played it smart — he boarded up his seaside home and had only the front door to secure before leaving the island around noon Thursday as Fran approached.

They were back inside to check one last thing and heard a screaming boom. The wind had kicked up the piece of plywood left for the door and wedged it in against the screen door handle, trapping them inside.

They called 911, but after 40 minutes had passed in about a half hour, Mr. Council called his sister to get the phone number of the one neighbor he could think of who'd been evacuated. That brought relief.

Hotel pressed into service

Some out-of-state utility workers will be able to get to the job through Currituck County in Currituck County, where an almost-finished hotel on U.S. 17 at Rte. 1277 in Waghville Beach.

Kyle Henson, a CP&I spokesman, said Mr. Agoff opened the hotel to workers so they wouldn't have to travel so far and from the job. Some would have had to stay as far away as Lenoir County. Motel rooms in Waghville are full. Because Landfall Park Motel doesn't have all of its first equipment in place, Mr. Agoff said, the county allowed the hotel to be used on the condition that resulting beamed.

The Currituck restaurant across the street, which was closed because it didn't have power, agreed to open and provide meals for the workers after CP&I helped the restaurant get power.

"I hope they like Greek food," Mr. Agoff said. "They won't be able to get shrimp and potatoes." Please see INLAND on page 1B.

Hurricane, aftermath take emotional toll

National Guardsmen walk by a demolished home as they patrol Saturday in Kure Beach.

The Heltons had almost finished clearing the trees and limbs of the driveway leading into their home of Middle Sound Loop Road.

Then the wind and water from Hurricane Fran came — pine, oak and hickory — that crashed across the drive during Fran. The house survived with only a scratch, but a large main

On the heels of the direct hit in July by Hurricane Berta, Fran was an added assault on area residents' psyche.

"It's so depressing. It's like everything," said Mr. Helton, flight attendant with US Air. "We can't do anything because the insurance company has to come. The worst thing is having bits with no water. You can't wash your hands. Life returned to normal relatively quickly after Hurricane Ber-which knocked down trees and limbs and caused power outages that were fixed within days.

Fran made a heavy hit, blowing trees, damaging houses and straying docks and boats.

Even with the work done at the physical repairs from Fran, it's no easier than the mental recovery.

Generators high on post-storm shopping lists

With thousands of people without electricity, finding a generator was a top priority in Waghville on Saturday afternoon.

More than 200 hopeful people waited in the parking lot for a chance to buy 400 generators at Sam's Club on Colgate Road.

A truckload of the generators was due to arrive at the center by noon. But managers were uncertain if additional generators would be available today.

"I pray they get one," said Chase Lettley of Burgaw. "Friends said this is the best one, with the most horsepower."

The generator at Sam's Club put out 5,000 watts, enough to run a microwave, television, toaster, well-mounted air conditioner or household appliances. The generator could also run a well pump, although a generator air conditioning system would be beyond its power.

"It was tough but safe," said Rocky Gault, who was waiting in line at Sam's. "It was hot and smoggy" Please see SUPPLIES on page 1B.

Despite an uninvited guest named Fran, Bruce and Marton Brock seen married Saturday at their Shalom Drive home. Fourteen friends had flown in from Germany on Wednesday for the ceremony.

Storm can't halt surprise wedding

Everything that could go wrong did. But without electricity in the 90-degree heat, Bruce and Marton Brock made the best of a wedding at the Shalom Drive home on Saturday.

"What else could we do? We Brock said, 'I want his love and swagging a Coke."

With an orchestra of their sons playing in the background, the Brouns tackled down just sandwiches and had lunch through a lattice that was the best yard for the late afternoon wedding.

Several family men used buckets to get black water and branches out of the pool while others raked up mud, baby blankets and regular trash from the garden.

"This isn't exactly how it was planned," he said. "What was planned was a surprise wedding at 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday. My 19-year-old sister, Andrea, had a heart attack.
