              -NOAAPORT
              Other NWS partners and NWS employees

From:       Darren Wright (Acting)
              Chief, Marine, Tropical, and Tsunami Services Branch

Subject: Marine Forecasts Website will be updated on or around
          September 17, 2019

Effective on or around September 17, 2019, the NWS will update its marine forecasts website with a new look and URL change. The website will be named NWS Marine Weather Services and be moved into the NWS Content Management System. The new web address will be:
<https://www.weather.gov/marine>

Currently, the web address
<https://www.weather.gov/marine>
redirects to the address of the current Marine Forecasts home page:
<https://www.nws.noaa.gov/om/marine/home.htm>

Users who have the current home page address bookmarked, will have to update their bookmarks to:
<https://www.weather.gov/marine>

Any bookmark with <https://www.nws.noaa.gov/om/marine>
in its web address, will need to be updated to:
<https://www.weather.gov/marine>

For example, the current web address for Coastal/Great Lakes Forecasts by Zone:
<https://www.nws.noaa.gov/om/marine/zone/usamz.htm>

will change to:
<https://www.weather.gov/marine/usamz>

The end products for forecasts and warnings will remain the same but the web addresses to get those products will change as described above.

After September 17, 2019, the current web address:
<https://www.nws.noaa.gov/om/marine/home.htm>
will redirect to:
<https://www.weather.gov/marine>

until December 31, 2019, after which the current web address will no longer be valid.

To get an idea what the homepage of the NWS Marine Weather Services will look like, click on the link below:

All of the forecasts, warnings, observations, radiofax charts and other information about NWS marine services from the current Marine Forecasts website will be located on the NWS Marine Weather Services website. The information has been reorganized and streamlined along with the new display. The site should be much easier to navigate.
