Scattered showers and embedded thunderstorms will develop across southern areas during the late morning.

The showers and storms will become more numerous and include heavy downpours as they spread north and northeast during the afternoon and evening.

There is a marginal risk across much of central NC for excessive rainfall leading to flash flooding of low-lying and poor drainage areas. There is a slight risk over the far southern Piedmont.