

Winter Storm Through Sunday

Event Summary:

- A winter storm will affect northeastern Wyoming and western South Dakota through Sunday afternoon.
- Snow will continue this morning across parts of northeastern Wyoming and northwestern South Dakota, spreading southward across the rest of the area by late afternoon.
- Cold temperatures will accompany the snow, with near record cold temperatures on Sunday and Sunday night. Conditions will improve during the day on Sunday.

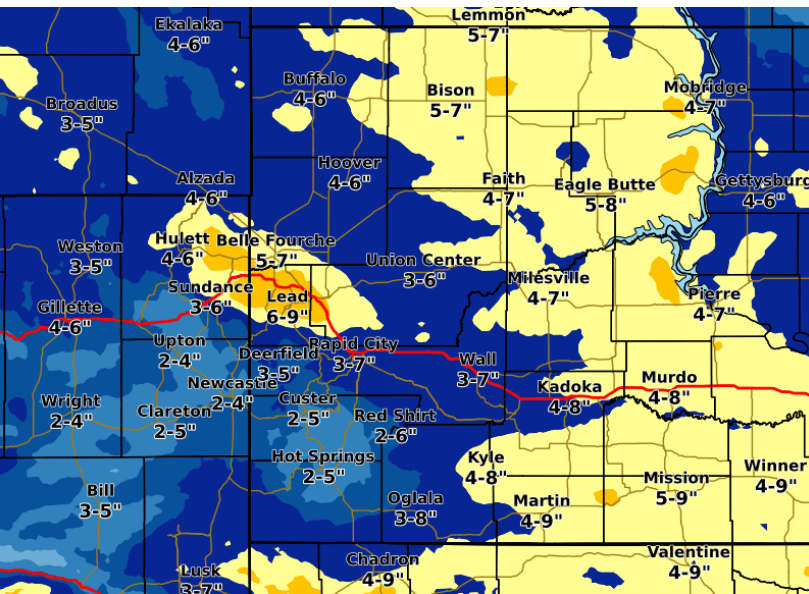

Changes since last report:

Tweaked a few snow amounts, but forecast is largely unchanged.

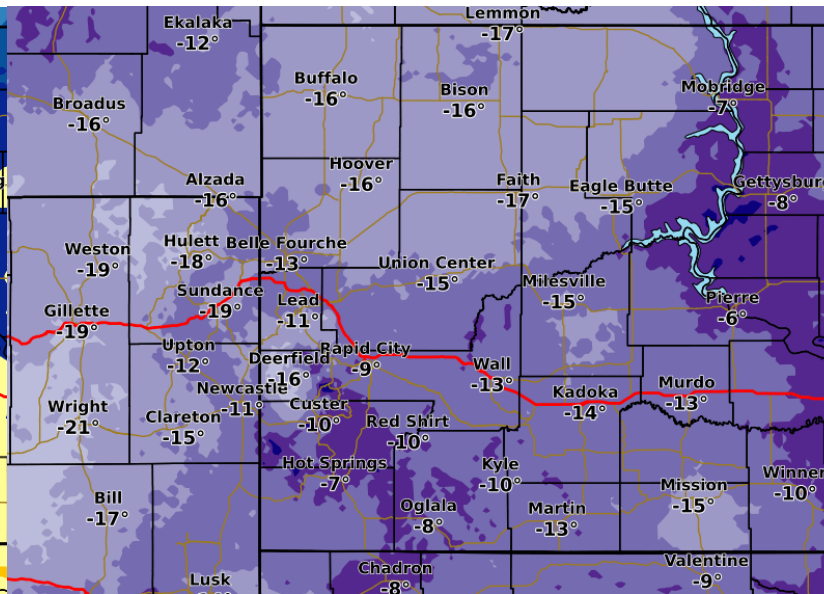

Winter Storm Through Sunday

Forecast Snow Amounts

Minimum Wind Chills Sunday Night

Hazards: Heavy snowfall of 6" or more, very cold temperatures, and winds of 15 to 25 mph gusting to around 30 mph.

Timing & Duration: Snow will continue this morning over northwestern South Dakota and northeastern Wyoming, spreading southward across the rest of the area by late this afternoon.

Impacts: Hazardous travel resulting from accumulating snow and blowing snow. Frostbite due to bitterly cold wind chills.

Confidence: High confidence of record low temperatures and gusty winds and high confidence for snow amounts.

For the Latest Information

On the Web: www.weather.gov/unr

NOAA Weather Radio: Local station listing at www.weather.gov/unr/nwr

Share

facebook.com/NWSRapidCity

twitter.com/NWSRapidCity